Learning Outcomes:

Upon successful completion of this course, students will be able to:

- Demonstrate familiarity with a range of major theoretical perspectives, such as semiotics, phenomenology, deconstruction and poststructuralism, theories of gender, postcolonial theory, critical race theory;
- Apply concepts from theoretical readings to the analysis of live performances and of dramatic and performance texts;
- Lead and critically reflect on “praxis” based activities, exploring the relationship between performance theory and performance practice;
- Demonstrate self-awareness by critically locating self in relation to readings and performances;
- Recognize the “real-world” applications and implications of critical and performance theory, with particular emphasis on the implications of critical and performance theory for historically marginalized groups;
- Contribute to the development of an intellectual community through participation in class seminars and activities outside of class (for example, reading groups, reading disciplinary journals, attending cultural events in Vancouver and Fraser Valley);
- Identify a research problem arising from critical and performance theory and develop a praxis-informed research methodology appropriate to research problem; and
- Effectively present research both orally and in writing.
