Learning Outcomes (These should contribute to students' ability to meet program outcomes and thus Institutional Learning Outcomes.)

Upon successful completion of this course, students will be able to:

1. Articulate the impact of contemporary interdisciplinary, collaborative art practices in contemporary and historical contexts, including non-Western and Indigenous practices.
2. Describe the ethical and personal considerations one must bring to collaborating across diversities, including the particularities of Indigenous-settler collaborations.
3. Collaborate effectively, respectfully, and creatively with diverse peers and community members.
4. Synthesize methods for generating, investigating, and responding as a group to creative research questions.
5. Devise collaborative artworks using experimental and/or unconventional practices and techniques.
6. Critically analyze interdisciplinary, collaborative art works from inclusive, equitable, and diverse perspectives.
7. Present a contemporary, interdisciplinary art installation with peers.

Recommended Evaluation Methods and Weighting (Evaluation should align to learning outcomes.)

Course Content and Topics

Three example modules that may structure the course:

1. Participation: how can we challenge the observer/maker divide in art?
2. Collaboration: how can working with partner(s) expand artistic practice?
3. Interactivity: how can audiences and participants be part of meaning-making in contemporary art?

- Participation, dialogue, performance, and presence in contemporary experimental art
- Interdisciplinary artistic collaborations across histories
- Indigenous approaches to and presentations of collaborative art
- Ethical collaborations: how ceremony and ritual can meaningfully inform participatory artworks
- Activating sensitive environments and social spaces
- Problematizing performance: politics of public presentation and spectatorship
- Challenging artistic assumptions through cooperation, collaboration and group project development
- Embodiment in art practices and the performing body
- Advanced documentation techniques - capture, processing, editing of collaborative works
- Strategies for activating spaces with unconventional/experimental artworks
