Learning Outcomes (These should contribute to students' ability to meet program outcomes and thus Institutional Learning Outcomes.)

Upon successful completion of this course, students will be able to:

1. Describe how Indigenous worldview is understood through stories of long ago as told in Stó:lō narratives, Salish Sea cosmologies, and other Indigenous nations throughout North America.
2. Reflect on how Indigenous worldviews are informing current movements in social justice, the environment and land stewardship, health and wellness, climate crisis, education, and self-governing policy initiatives.
3. Analyze how indigenous worldview values reciprocity between humans and the land and how this perspective informs reconciliation actions.
4. Explore the intersections of indigenous stories, indigenous science, and cultural protocols and how these perspectives complement and enrich an understanding of worldview.
5. Reflect on the meaning of learning and unlearning, and in the process come to a place of appreciation for indigenous voice raised within indigenous worldview narratives and oral histories.
6. Summarize the contributions and legacies towards greater reconciliation in all sectors of our society of Indigenous knowledge keepers, language champions, and cultural leaders.
