Course Description:
This course is an introduction to the sociology of international development. It looks at the nature and development of the third world (the largest part of the global social system) and the major explanations of underdevelopment. Among the case studies used to evaluate critically the alternative paths of development there is an emphasis on examples from Latin America. It will be of special interest to those planning to teach, to anyone hoping to work in or travel to the Third World, to those interested in Canada’s position in the world, and to anyone concerned about globalization.

LEARNING OBJECTIVES / GOALS / OUTCOMES / LEARNING OUTCOMES:

The course is designed to provide students with an appreciation of the general nature and situation of the Third World, of differences within the Third World, of its relationship to the developed world, and of efforts to direct change within Third World societies. By the conclusion of the course, students should have developed:

- a critical understanding of some theories of development and underdevelopment and an ability to link these theories to the major sociological perspectives and traditions
- a critical understanding of "non-industrialization options" for the third world
- a greater knowledge of the work done by governmental and non-governmental organizations in the Third World, and the assumptions underlying that work
- a critical awareness of the pros and cons of foreign aid and development policies
- an ability to assess future alternatives for the Third World.

METHODS:

Class time is divided between lectures and seminar discussions. Videos and simulation exercises are used frequently to illustrate course content.

PRIOR LEARNING ASSESSMENT RECOGNITION (PLAR):

Credit can be awarded for this course through PLAR  YES  X  NO
