COURSE DESCRIPTIVE TITLE

Eating and Thinking: Food, Identity, and Power in Global Societies

CALENDAR DESCRIPTION:

In the modern world, it is increasingly the case that people neither eat what they grow nor grow what they eat. This seminar course examines the global ethnographic, social, political-economic, and theoretical implications of this conundrum. We explore a number of issues in the contemporary anthropology and sociology of food, including the gender, status and identity meanings of food; the relationships between food, power, and development; the local and global impacts of food production and consumption; and the growing importance of food-based movements for social change.

Note: This course is offered as ANTH 360 and SOC 360. Students may take only one of these for credit.
